

MARSHALL BRADLEY GETS HIS MAN

Jumps from Interurban, and Places Alleged Bootlegger
Under Arrest

MADE SENSATIONAL ARREST YESTERDAY

Two warrants were issued in the county court yesterday for the arrest, of Will Reynolds, a well known bricklayer, marking up against him two charges for selling liquor. Reynolds must have been tipped that he was wanted and started on foot out of the city. Chief Bradley happened to be in the city yesterday and Judge Bradley told him to arrest Reynolds, if he should run across him. When the interurban swept into Fleming's curve, Chief Bradley on his way home, saw Reynolds walking by the side of the track. He did not waste a second in jerking the signal cord and as the train slowed down, jumped off and placed Reynolds under arrest.

Miners at Central City Appoint Committee to Make Investigation of Accident

State Mine Inspector Norwood, who has been at Central City since the disaster in the mine of the Central Coal & Iron Co., in which four miners were killed recently, left last week for Lexington without making any report as to his investigation. He will probably do so within the next few days. A special committee of miners also was appointed to make an investigation, and this report has not been made public as yet. The mine has been idle since the accident occurred, as the time has since been spent in cleaning up the barge damaged and making repairs. It is expected work will be resumed this week.

MINERS BAR BOY SCOUTS

Constitutional Amendment, With One Aimed at the Civic Federation, Is Adopted.

Indianapolis, Jan. 27. The Boy Scout movement came under the ban of the United Mine Workers of America, along with the Civil Federation today, when the miners' convention adopted an amendment to the constitution providing that no one connected with the Boy Scouts shall be permitted to be a member of the union.

The section refusing membership in the union to persons connected with the Civic Federation was adopted with little opposition.

James Herrin of Sparta, Ill., who proposed the Boy Scout amendment declared the movement was detrimental to unionism and would grow into an organization of strike breakers.

BROUGHT TO LIGHT

Earlington People Receiving the Full Benefit

There have been many cases like the following in Earlington. Every one relates the experience of people we know. These plain straight forward statements will do much toward relieving the suffering of thousands. Such testimony will be with interest to many people.

Mrs. R. A. Smith, Wilson St., Earlington, Ky., says; "I am glad to publicly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. My kidney were badly disordered and the ache in my back was so acute that I could not stoop without suffering severely. The pain often extended into my sides and became more acute if I stood on my feet fifteen minutes. I had dizzy spells and many times was forced to grasp something in order to steady myself. I also suffered from terrible headaches and many days could scarcely get out of bed. I can safely say that I spent more than one hundred dollars for medicines and doctors' treatments, but obtained scarcely any benefit. On the advice of a friend, I procured a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at the St. Bernard Drug Store and began their use. This remedy cured me less than two weeks. I am glad to recommend it to other kidney sufferers."

The Home Merchant.

A portion of our people seem disinclined to patronize the home merchant except when they can't help it. They will ask a grocer to deliver a yeast cake to their back door. But when it comes to ordering a winter's supply of canned goods, they write to some distant department store.

It should be needless to say, that if everyone did this, we should have stores to rent, fewer opportunities for people to earn a living at home.

On the contrary, if we all bought everything possible at home, our stores could keep even better stocks. It is a great convenience to be able to make selections from a good line of goods at home. This becomes possible where everyone loyally supports the home merchants.

Under such circumstances existing stores could do a larger business, employ more people, and new concerns would start. Every person owning real estate or a business here would see it grow more valuable.

Even the man with nothing would gain. There would be more property to tax, hence more public improvements. With more money in circulation our fraternal societies, churches and clubs could serve the community more efficiently.

Cost of the Italian Adventure.

How much is the "Italian Adventure" in Tripoli to cost?

The original estimate, said to have been made to the government in Rome, was $10,000,000. This was also the original estimate for England's Afghan war, which afterward ran up to over $100,000,000. In the same way, the Boer war, as "budgeted" by Chancellor Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, was to cost about $50,000,000; the total bill was $1,200,000.

The looks of the Tripolitan balance sheet are changing daily. Recently a political economist in Rome has put the probable debit at $200,000,000. But most men who know how costly a thing an army in action is said that it is too moderate.

On the best advices obtainable in this country the war is costing Italy about $1,000,000 a day.

SUIT FILED AGAINST E. L. HENDRICKS

Plaintiffs Seek to Recover About $16,875 and Say They Were Deceived in Buying Stock

Suit was filed in Circuit Court by W. D. Coil, T. L. Coil and H. H. Coil against E. L. Hendricks, in which the plaintiffs seek to recover about $16,875.

In the petition which has been filed by Jouson & Jennings and Yost & Laffoon, the plaintiffs set up allegations the defendant practiced fraud in selling to them 125 shares of stock in the Sunset Coal Co.

The petition asserts that in 1908 the Sunset Coal Co. had $100,000 capital stock, $80,000 of which was preferred and $20,000 was common, the par value being $100 a share. The holders of preferred stock were not to participate in the profits or to elect officers but were to receive an annual 6 per cent dividend.

The plaintiffs then state that they purchased from the defendant 125 shares of common stock for $9,375, on the assurance given by the defendant that the coal company has $7,500 of accounts it above all indebtedness.

After they had bought the stock, the plaintiff alleges, they learned that there was an indebtedness against the company of $1,099.55 above all accounts due the company.

They assert they were deceived into buying stock and ask for $9,375 with interest from May 19 1910 and also seek $7,500 damages.

Church Notes

Madisonville Christian Church

One of the largest audiences of the season assembled at the Sunday morning service and listen to the Sermon on The Stewardship of wealth. The attention was perfect and the indications are that every good work at home and abroad will profit by that service.

Announcements made at the morning hour indicated a lecture (free) on the preservation of the health of women, by a visiting lady from Canada, Tuesday Jan. 30, 3 p. m. in the main auditorium of the church. Also that there would be an official meeting of the Board of Officers after prayer meeting Wednesday night in the Minister's Study and Choir Practice at the same hour in the main Auditorium.

We were rejoiced to read splendid articles in last week's Standard from Evangelists W. T. Brooks and Roger Fife and to note that the Brown Evangelistic Company had a good meeting at Stuart, Iowa, with 71 additions.

Christian Endeavor announces a business meeting and social in the basement of the church Thursday night, Feb. 1. They are rehearsing for a splendid program which they will render Sunday night in honor of the birthday of Christian Endeavor.

The minister has received letters from Morganfield and Hustonville, Ky., and from Birmingham, Ala., congratulating the City of Madisonville on whipping the liquor forces by a majority of 148. Senator T. H. Paynter writes the minister that he will give his attention to the consideration of a proper bill regulating the shipment of liquor into prohibition territory.

Now that the liquor question is settled and almost everybody seems delighted with the result, let us settle down to the great business of the Church of Jesus Christ the bringing to the foot of the cross of every unsaved soul so that the Blood of Christ may cleanse them from sin.

The man who whispers down a well
About the things he has to sell
Will never reap a crop of dollars
Like he who climbs a tree and
"hollers."

The triumph of the temperance forces in Kentucky is now complete, with the passage of the county unit bill at Frankfort last week. The campaign promises of both the dominant parties in Kentucky have been fully performed by their representatives in the Kentucky Legislature. Now let us settle down and be content and exercise our energies in enforcement of the law as it is and as we have voted it in our various counties, according to the prevailing sentiment of the voters in those counties. In Hopkins county and perhaps especially in the cities of Madisonville and Earlington we have our own largest and most important task in this big work of temperance and the enforcement of the law. Let the work of rigid enforcement proceed. Earlington, for instance, has a proud record of having been a dry town, continuously since the year 1882 and during all that time the lapses from a real and continuous enforcement of the law have been few and very brief. If there are bootleggers now let us "give them the boot"—and swiftly. The temperance sentiment has prevailed again in Madisonville and with emphasis. The county remains dry indeed if our officers and our citizens will do their duty. And nobody could question but that it is good politics, in the present circumstances, for any Democratic and Republican official to do his best for the enforcement of local option, to which both parties are strongly committed.

"Thelma" Pleased a Fair Sized Audience

A fair sized audience witnessed a dramatization of Marie Corelli's famous story, "Thelma," at the Opera House last Thursday night. The play was well staged and the company splendid. Miss Sadie Cragin appeared in the title roll of Thelma and proved herself a real good actress, showing ability of high order in the exacting roll.

Mr. David Rivers as Olaf Guldmar, did some of the best character acting ever seen here. Mr. Sydney Morris, as Sir Phillip Errington and Mr. Harry Sullivan, as George Lorimer, his friend, both deserve special mention, as Miss Dorothy Ray and Mr. N. R. Cregan. The members of the company all played their parts well, and, as a whole, it was a well balanced company. Should they ever return to Earlington they would in all probability be greeted by a full house.

MISS MINERVA and WILLIAM GREEN HILL

CHAPTER I.

A Scandalized Virgin.

The bus drove up to the gate and stopped under the electric street light. Perched on the box by the big, black negro driver sat a little boy whose slender figure was swathed in a huge rain coat.

Miss Minerva was on the porch waiting to receive him.

"Mercy on me, child," she said, "what on earth made you ride up there? Why didn't you get inside?"

"I just wanted to ride by Sam Lamb," replied the child as he was lifted down. "An' I see a nice fat little man name Major."

"He jes' wouldn't ride inside, Miss Minerva," interrupted the driver, quickly, to pass over the blush that rose to the spinster's thin cheek at mention of the major. "Twan't no use fer ter try ter make him ride no whars but jes' up by me. He jes' 'fused an' 'fused an' 'sputed an' 'sputed; he jes' tuck ter me 'fom de minute he got off'm de train an' sot eyes on me; he am 'one easy chile ter git 'quainted wid; so I jes' h'isted him up by me. Here am his verllas, ma'am."

"Good-by, Sam Lamb," said the child as the negro got back on the box and gathered up the reins. "I'll see you to-morrow."

Miss Minerva imprinted a thin, old-maid kiss on the sweet, childish mouth. "I am your Aunt Minerva," she said, as she picked up his satchel.

The little boy carelessly drew the back of his hand across his mouth.

"What are you doing?" she asked. "Are you wiping my kiss off?"

"Naw'm," he replied, "It's jest a—It's a-rubbin' it in, I reckon."

"Come in, William," and his aunt led the way through the wide hall into a big bedroom.

"Billy, ma'am," corrected her nephew.

"William," firmly repeated Miss Minerva. "You may have been called Billy on that plantation where you were allowed to run wild with the negroes, but your name is William Green Hill, and I shall insist upon your being called by it."

She stooped to help him off with his coat, remarking as she did so: "What a big overcoat; it is several sizes too large for you."

"Darned if it ain't," agreed the child promptly.

"Who taught you such a naughty word?" she asked in a horrified voice. "Don't you know it is wrong to curse?"

"You call that cussin'?" came in scornful tones from the little boy. "You don't know cussin' when you see it; you jes' oughter hear ole Uncle Jimmy-Jawed Jup'ter, Aunt Cindy's husband; he'll show you someer the pretties' cussin' you ever did hear."

"Who is Aunt Cindy?"

"She's the colored 'oman what tends to me ever sence me an' Wilkes Booth Lincoln's born, an' Uncle Jup'ter is her husband an' he sho' is a stingeree on cussin'. Is yo' husband much of a cusser?" he inquired.

A pale pink dyed Miss Minerva's thin, sallow, face.

"I am not a married woman," she replied, curtly, "and I most assuredly would not permit any oaths to be used on my premises."

"Well, Uncle Jimmy-Jawed Jup'ter is jes' nach'elly bou'n' to cuss—he's got a reputation to keep up," said Billy.

He sat down in a chair in front of his aunt, crossed his legs and smiled confidently up into her face.

"Hell an' damn is jes' easy ev'ry day words to that nigger. I wish you could hear him cuss on a Sunday jest one time, Aunt Minerva; he'd sho' make you open yo' eyes an' take in yo' sign. But Aunt Cindy don't 'low me an' Wilkes Booth Lincoln to say nothin' 't all 'bout jes' 'darn' tell we gits grown mens, an' puts on long pants."

"Wilkes Booth Lincoln?" questioned his aunt.

"An't you never hear teller him?" asked the child. "He's ole Aunt Blue-Gum Tempy's Peruny Pearlina's boy; an' Peruny Pearlina," he continued enthusiastically, "he ain't no ord'nary nigger, her hair ain't got nare kink an' she's got the grandes' clothes. They ain't nothin' 'bout her. She got ten chillens an' ev'ry single one of 'em's got a diff'unt pappy, she been married so much. They do say she got injun blood in her, too."

Miss Minerva, who had been standing prim, erect and stiff, fell limply into a convenient rocking chair, and looked closely at this orphaned nephew who had come to live with her.

She saw a beautiful, bright, attractive, little face out of which big, saucy, gray eyes shaded by long curling black lashes looked winningly at her; she saw a sweet, childish red mouth, a mass of short, yellow curls, and a thin but graceful little figure.

"I knows the names of all ole Aunt Blue-Gum Tempy's Peruny Pearlina's chillens," he was saying proudly: "Admiral Farragut Moses the Prophet Esquire, he's the bigges'; an' Alice Ann Maria Dan Step-an'-Go-Fetch-it, she had to nuss all the res'; she say fas' as she git th'oo nussin' one an' 'low she goin' to have a breathin' spell here come another one an' she got to nuss it. An' the nex' is Mount Sinai Tabernacle, he name for the church where ole Aunt Blue-Gum Tempy's Peruny Pearlina takes her sackerment; an' the nex' is first Thessalonians; Second Thessalonians, he's dead an' gone to the Bad Place 'cause he skunt a cat—I don't mean skin the cat on a actin' pole like me an' Wilkes Booth Lincoln does—he skunt a sho' 'nough cat what was a black cat, what was a ole witch, an' she come back an' ha'n't him, an' he growed thinner an' thinner an' 'weasler an' 'weasler, tell finely he wan't nothin' 'tall but a skel'ton, an' the Bad Man won't 'low nobody 'tall to give his parch tongue no water, an' he got to, ever after amen, he toast on a pitchfork. An' Oleander Magnolia All thea is the nex'," he continued, enumerating Peruny Pearlina's offspring on his thin, well-molded fingers, "she got the seven-year itch; an' Gettysburg, an' Biddle-&-Brothers-Mercantile-Co.; he name for the sto' where ole Aunt Blue-Gum Tempy's Peruny Pearlina gits credit so she can pay when she fetches in ner cotton in the fall; an' Wilkes Booth Lincoln, him an' me's twins; we was borned the same day only I's borned to my mamma an' he's borned to hie'n an' Doctor Jenkins fetched me an' Doctor Shackelfoot fetched him. An' Declimus Ultimus," the little boy triumphantly put his right forefinger on his left little one, thus making the tenth, "she's the baby an' she's got the colle an' 'cries loud 'nough to wake up Is-ra-el; Wilkes Booth Lincoln say he wish the little devil would die. Peruny Pearlina firs' name her 'Doctor Shackelfoot 'cause he fetches all her chillens, but the doctor he say that ain't no name for a girl, so he name her Declimus Ultimus."

Miss Minerva, sober, proper, dignified, religious old maid unused to children, listened in frozen amazement and paralyzed silence. She decided to put the child to bed at once that she might collect her thoughts, and lay some plans for the rearing of this sadly neglected, little orphaned nephew.

"William," she said, "it is bedtime, and I know you must be sleepy after your long ride on the cars. Would you like something to eat before I put you to bed? I saved you some supper."

"Naw'm, I ain't hungry; the major man what I talk to on the train tuck me in the dinin'-room an' gimme all I could hol'; I jes' eat an' eat tell they want a wrinkle in me," was the reply. "He axed me 'bout you, too. Is he name Major Minerva?"

She opened a door in considerable confusion, and they entered a small, neat room adjoining.

"This is your own little room, William," said she, "you see it opens into mine. Have you a night-shirt?"

"Naw'm, I don't need no night-shirt. I jes' sleeps in my unions and sometimes in my overalls."

"Well, you may sleep in your union suit tonight," said the scandalized relative, "and I'll see what I can do for you to-morrow. Can you undress yourself?"

Her small nephew wrinkled his nose, disdainfully. "Well, I reckon so," he scornfully made answer. "Me an' Wilkes Booth Lincoln been undressin' usself ever sence we's born."

"I'll come in here after a while and turn off the light. Good night, William."

"Good-night, Aunt Minerva," responded the little boy.

CHAPTER II.

A few minutes later, as Miss Minerva sat rocking and thinking, the door opened and a lean, graceful, little figure, clad in a skinny, gray union suit, came into the room.

"Ain't I a-goin' to say no prayers?" demanded a sweet, childish voice. "Aunt Cindy hear me an' Wilkes Booth Lincoln say us prayers ev'ry night sence we's born."

"Why, of course you must say your prayers," said his aunt, blushing at having to be reminded of her duty by this young heathen; "kneel down here by me."

Billy locked at his aunt's bony frame and thought of Aunt Cindy's soft, fat, ample lap. A wistful look crossed his childish face as he dropped down in front of her and laid his head against her knee, then the bright, beautiful little face took on an angelic expression as he closed his eyes and softly chanted:

"Now I lays me down to sleep, I prays the Lord my soul to keep, If I should die beto' I wake, I prays the Lord my soul to take."

"Keep 'way f'om me hoodoo an' witch, Lead my paf f'om the p'ohouse gate, I pines fer the golden harps an' sich, Oh, Lord, I'll set an' pray an' wait."

"Oh, Lord, bless ev'rybody; bless me an' Aunt Cindy, an' Wilkes Booth Lincoln, an' Aunt Blue-Gum Tempy's Peruny Pearlina, an' Uncle Jimmy-Jawed Jup'ter, an' ev'rybody, an' Sam Lamb, an' Aunt Minerva, an' allor Aunt Blue-Gum Tempy's Peruny Pearlina's chillens, an' give Aunt Minerva a billy goat or a little nannny if she'd ruther, an' bless Major Minerva, an' make me

"That's my rabbit foot; you won't never have no 'sease 't ail an' nobody can't never conjure you if you wears a rabbit foot. This here one is the lef' hin' foot; it was ketch'd by a red-headed nigger with cross-eyes in a graveyard at twelve o'clock on a Friday night, when they's a full moon. He giv' it to Aunt Cindy to the 'roun' my nake when I's a baby. Ain't you got no rabbit foot?" he anxiously inquired.

"No," she answered. "I have never had one and I have never been conjured either. Give it to me, William; I can't allow you to be superstitious," and she held out her hand.

Every Dollar of an Ad Reader's Money is Above Par

Frequently Its Buying Power is Actually Doubled

Your dollars vary in value as they vary in purchasing power. The man or woman who studies advertisements is able, frequently, to make one dollar do the usual work of two. And the experienced reader of advertisements will always make a dollar command a premium—make it buy more than a dollar's worth, as figured on "ruling prices" of things. How much "above par" are the dollars in your pocket worth? It will depend on how closely you study the buying opportunities outlined in the store ads.
